

June 3, 1993

To Whom It May Concern:

On April 23, 1993, we presented "A Fine and Pleasant Misery: The Humor of Patrick McManus" starring Tim Behrens. The presentation was extremely successful. We had attendance of almost eight hundred, which was very good for us.

The play itself was a delight. It is a marvelous piece of theater, appropriate for families and a broad range of ages. There was something in the material for everyone.

Tim Behrens proved to be on top of the material and is a very skilled actor. He had the audience in the palm of his hand almost immediately.

We are so pleased with the program, that we are having him back in November as one of the highlights of our Dad's Weekend festivities. I can unconditionally recommend this program to anyone.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "James B. Crow".

James B. Crow
Director